Freize Desk

The Freize desk is an exercise in controlled tension, in which formal and material opposites find a measured synthesis. A project that explores the boundary between rigor and spontaneity, translating it into a deliberately asymmetrical yet harmonious structure. The slender and monumental legs extend upwards with a fluid movement, leading the gaze towards the contrasting central insert, made of wood, marble or leather. Three natural materials selected for their authenticity and their subtle imperfections, which enrich the project with material depth and tactile value. Each finish gives the product a distinct identity, both aesthetically and functionally, allowing the desk to adapt to different contexts while maintaining a strong formal coherence.
